

Maithili and all other North Indian modern languages are not Standard languages. Maithili is a defective byproduct of failure of Sanskrit Vyakaran Standardization.

Since our forefathers spoke, wrote and thought in Sanskrit, I wish all of us to return to our true mother tongue SANSKRIT .

Humans inhabited the Indian subcontinent at least seventy thousand years back. Sanskrit gradually developed within the four corners of Aryavart, not outside as many suggest. We do not have any clear archeological evidence to support external origin. On the other hand, there are plenty of internal sources to prove that Aryans went outside to show that Sanskrit outflows with Indians going outside. Sugriiv's Atlas, given in Valmiki Ramayana is one such example. Yudhistir, sending his brothers in all four directions, including Arjun to the North, is another such example(See BORI Mahabharat). Drying of the Saraswati river sent its inhabitants not only inwards within Bharat but also outside. Recently Shree Yagya Vedam has deciphered Indus Valley Script with the help of Cryptography Computer Science and explains that Indus lipi is the lipi of early Sanskrit. This Sindhu lipi gradually changed over time to Brahmi lipi. His published works on this topic are available. There is plenty of proof of trading exchanges of Indians with the Middle East and Romans. All the Kerala temple golds came to Bharat(Kerala) because of the sea-trade of our forefathers.

We all know that Cities become socio-politico-economic centers When Saraswati and Lakshmi join hands, resulting in powerful empires like Magadh, Hastinapur, Kashmir in ancient Bhara. We do see such imperial cities in the ancient STAN countries.

Let us look at Language Development from Quality Management perspective.As it is not any different from that of a Product Development Cycle of any product in the modern factories.

To maintain the quality of a Product, one needs a list of specifications, called Standard and it is maintained by Quality Control practices and procedures. If one fails to maintain quality, defective products start piling up as a result.

In the case of Sanskrit(think it as a product), exactly this happened. Acharya Panini, Acharya Katyayan and other scientists(Bhasha Vaigyaniks) created a Standard called "Vyakaran" to maintain the quality of Sanskrit language. Whole Bharat was supposed to follow and maintain that Vyakaran standard to maintain the quality. Unfortunately this did not happen. Quality Control broke and as a result many defective languages of North Bharat sprung up.

THIS LACK OF STANDARDIZATION of Sanskrit bhasha resulted in SEVERAL DEFECTIVE SANSKRIT versions(product), lately known as modern North Indian languages. I am just naming a few here: Marathi, Gujarati, Sindhi, Punjabi, Hindi, Kashmiri, Bengali, Maithili, Nepali etc.

Amarnath Jha

2/18/2025

Lawrenceville, NJ, USA